[] my Coordinator for Academic Relations, will be in touch with you on who the speaker will be and where and when he will be able to meet with your group.

We will require the names of the students involved. As you may know, we will not be able to include any students with foreign citizenship.

Dear Mr. Smith:

As you may remember, this university runs an annual program for its political science students during the spring semester in Washington, D.C. The basic objective of the program is to enable the students to gain a first-hand exposure to the American political process in a way which is rarely possible in a traditional academic setting. The central feature of this program is a series of meetings with individuals in a variety of positions in government and politics. You have been kind enough to meet with our students in the past. I am now writing to ask whether you would be willing to meet with this year's group.

This year's group includes fifteen students, all political science majors in the junior year plus one M.A. student. I wonder if you could again find a short period during which these students and I might visit with you to learn about the problems which confront you and the activities in which you have been engaged in the course of your work. It goes without saying that the timing of such a meeting would be at your convenience. The students are doing regular coursework at Georgetown University on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, but they are free on Tuesdays and Thursdays for whatever meetings I can arrange.

Our activities begin on Tuesday, January 19, and will continue through Friday, April 30. We would be pleased if a meeting could be worked out on any Tuesday or Thursday during this period with the exception of Tuesdays and Thursdays falling between April 5 and April 14, when the students will be on vacation.

The format of such a seminar would be at your discretion. You might wish to make a few preliminary remarks about some aspect of your work and then perhaps permit the students to raise a few questions, or alternatively, you could have the students merely raise questions from the outset.

I can be contacted by mail or by telephone at the Washington address at the top of this letter, though I will usually be in New York from Friday through Monday (120 W. 97 St., New York City 10025, 212-865-6989). I am hopeful that you will find it possible to help in this worthwhile endeavor once again this year and that you will find the students and their questions of interest.

Yours truly,

Frank Wolf
